Book Summary

The LMJ, hyper-sensory toads, are three in number. They wade through adventures that aren't always clear, but are resolutely optimistic and bringers of light. They extricate themselves from extreme situations, each with their own untimely croak. The Middle Ages hatched them in their pond, and they occasionally experience all kinds of weather! Three tales made into one!

The Author

Aylcée Tarha begins her work on children's imagery as a storyteller. She enjoys history, literature, and legends. Her infectious joy makes her an author as original as her characters. No barriers stop her from seamlessly transitioning from fairy tales to narratives.

"Any resemblance to facts and characters existing or having existed would be purely fortuitous and could only be the result of pure coincidence."

1 The Black Rider

Part 1: A Little Paradise

Once upon a time...

Three very cute little toads live in a lovely pond in the Enchanted Forest. Their names are Lénimond, Marilande, and Jeandisco. They each have a job that serves as a 'cover' during short, top-secret missions. Lénimond is a flight attendant on the Libel'Libres airline's planes. Marilande is an entertainer at the Woodland amusement park.

Jeandisco is an entertainer at Music'Ole.

This miniature world lives in perfect harmony despite a cosmopolitan civil society. It is a group of insectivorous species: beetles, arachnids, amphibians, carnivores, and vegetarians. This place is teeming with life, magical, charming: a kind fairy hides from curious eyes behind immense clumps of yellow broom, green and brown reeds, under a discreet weeping willow.

-Hello dear Lénimond, are you well today?

-Oh yes, very well indeed. And you, Marilande, how's it going?

-Phew, me? Still pretty rusty joints-wise!

-Ah, then do like me, gym every morning early!

-Oh certainly, yes. You're used to it, darling, not me. And besides, take my word for it, I don't feel like gesticulating.

-See how well it works for me! Not a single greasy hair on my legs, arms, stomach, or chin!

-Thanks for the advice, dear friend. But I don't feel like a great athlete; I prefer to bask in the sun!

-From morning to night, you'll be happy if you imitate me, try it!

-And you two, already up? So early in the morning? You're early risers: get more rest! You've woken me up! -But Jeannot, it's almost ten o'clock, come on!

-What? You couldn't have told me earlier, right?

-You didn't tell us anything about it last night at the dinner party.

-I'm late now! I'm not going to make it!

-And your alarm clock, broken again? Buy another one!

-Oh my, this is crazy! I have an appointment in fifteen minutes at the recording studio with my boss!

-Well, get out of here without taking a shower, get changed!

This trio loves to have fun, have friends, and share their joy. In this paradise, sheltered by the woods and its thick vegetation, the inhabitants enjoy a fun activity while they relax. Around the pond, each insect reveals a talent, a profession, an artistic field. The Elders have a role to play in imparting wisdom to the younger generations. They are born storytellers.

-Hi, neighbor! Is your back better since the massage?

-Hello! Are you there? And school? Are you skipping?

-No, of course not. I'm off, I'm late, that's all!

-Hello, madam! Are you already working? And the babies?

-How beautiful you look dressed like this! They're sleeping, and I'm washing.

-I'd like some green clay for my poultices.

-And me, a strong syrup for my dry cough. It's getting heated.

Everyone is busy and puts their heart into their work. Proud to have accomplished their tasks, they offer a friendly toast.

Their artisanal work flatters them within the community. Despite their busy schedules, they often get together: drinks, parties, evening gatherings, card games, dice games, bingo, raffles. Everything is an excuse for leisure and mutual aid for humanitarian organizations.

-Who should we choose as our favorite organization this year?

-It's too difficult because there are so many great ones!

-What if the committee gave a chance to those who haven't been rewarded so far? That would silence the grumblers!

-Yes, so no one will say we're showing favoritism.

-That's one way of looking at it, yes. It can help, yes.

-Double publicity advantage at the same time.

Lénimond is an active member: thanks to the spiders, weaving webs, the little grasshoppers bounce on these mini-trampolines while their sick mother rests for a few days. Disguised as Santa Claus, he delivers gifts to the elderly in retirement homes, giving them the.....
